Barbara Stanwyck is one of the screen's most versatile beauties. Her charm and talent, immediately recognized, has gained for her a large following. Here, we see Miss Stanwyck with a complete wardrobe she wears in "The Woman In Red," a Warner Brothers-First National picture which deals with Chicago's gold coast. "The Secret Bride" and "A Lost Lady" were other recent pictures in which she was featured.

1. Formal dinner dress of gold lame with frills of gold satin across the shoulders, down the sleeves and forming the uneven motif of bottom and train.

2. Spring print afternoon frock, fresh as a flower, with jade green pattern on beige background. The frills are of solid green chiffon and belt of jade green velvet has ornamental buckle.

3. A beach costume of heavenly blue with darker blue cord at neck and side.

4. Street ensemble of English breed in shades of brown and tan, brown canvas trimming, with mull purse and toque to match, and brown crystal bracelet as an accessory.

5. Informal evening frock of white crepe without which no woman's wardrobe is complete. The skirt is long and graceful, bodice beauty depending on a simple drap from shoulder to waistline accentuated with shirring.

6. Luxurious rose negligee for informal hours at home. Smart, high collar with frog fastenings down the front and all the insouciance of a Russian officer's tunic.

7. White gabardine riding breeches with black cloth coat and vest, derby hat and imported patent leather boots. An overnight bag, potty bag and monogram kerchief complete the dainty details of Missy's wardrobe.
